Care instructions for Velvet Upholstery

The delicate velvet upholstery gives your furniture an elegant and noble look

Velvet is a type of woven tufted fabric in which the cut threads are evenly distributed, with a short dense pile, giving its characteristic expression. Because of its unusual softness and appearance, it adds a luxurious feeling to your furniture.

This delicate velvet upholstery of natural cotton fibers is a living fabric, therefore, when exposed to pressure, the fibers/nap may appear flat and resulting in slight colour shifts or marks.

fibers direction. Typically around edges, seams and piping, where the fibers are more spread, the velvet is more delicate and colour shifts or marks might appear. All furniture upholstered with the authentic velvet is made by hand, contributing to its unique and exclusive look.

On the curves of the furniture, the velvet can shift from lighter to darker hues, depending on the

Maintenance of velvet

If the velvet fibers appear flat, it is suggested to use a steamer to raise it. When a steamer is not available, a damp (not wet) cloth can be applied on the area overnight, which will restore the fibers.

If necessary, repeat the treatment.

The same result can be achieved by spraying a small amount of demineralized water on the area at a distance of 20 cm and letting it dry overnight. It is recommended to treat the entire surface to avoid colour differences.

Velvet must not be rubbed vigorously, as this may damage the fabric and colour.

The upholstered furniture should only be used when the fabric is completely dry. A hair-dryer at low temperature can be used to dry the area at a 20 cm distance. Once dry, stroke the velvet with your hands to raise the velvet fibers.

	SUNLIGHT: No upholstered furniture should be in direct sunlight.
	WATER: Avoid spilling large amounts of water on the fabric.
	HEAT: Do not iron the velvet.
